Ten Things You Need to Know to Prepare Your Dog for a Disaster

For pet owners faced with a flood, fire, hurricane, earthquake, or other crisis, disaster experts are all of one mind on what to do:

Take your pets with you.

While animals are not allowed in disaster-relief shelters, an increasing number of animal shelters and veterinarians are better prepared now than ever before to take in animals during an emergency.

In fact, a model program started by the California Veterinary Medical Association has a 'veterinarian in place in each county to help coordinate animal-relief efforts. Other states are starting to see the light, too, with veterinarians, shelter groups, and specially trained disaster teams from the Sacramento, Calif., based United Animal Nations are prepared to do for animals what the Red Cross does for people.

Why all the changes? A growing realization that animals need help, too, and that some people choose to put their lives in danger rather than abandon their pets.

So take your pets. Also take their food, leashes, medicines, blankets, and carriers if told to evacuate.

You do can do better, still, if you plan ahead. Here are some tips from disaster-planning experts.

1. Have a Plan

Prepare for all possibilities, including the possibility that you may be away from home when disaster strikes. Make sure that everyone in your family, children, too! is prepared in the event of an emergency. Make a plan and go over it until everyone knows what to do.

People need to rely on each other during emergencies, and this is just as true when it comes to your pets. Get to know your neighbors, and put a plan in place to help each other out. Find out from local shelters and veterinary organizations what their emergency response plans are and how you fit into them in case of a disaster.

2. Know What Your Veterinarian's Plans Are

Ask your veterinarian if he has a disaster plan, and how he plans to fit in with other veterinarians in an emergency. If he has never thought of it, pushing him a little on the subject won't hurt. If he has no interest, consider changing vets or exploring back-up care for your dog from someone who is more tapped in.

3. Maintain Your Pet's Permanent and Temporary ID

Most animals will survive a disaster. But too many will never see their families again without a way to determine which pet belongs to which family. That's why pets should always wear a collar and identification tags. Better still is permanent identification that can't slip off, such as a tattoo or imbedded microchip.

Keep temporary ID tags at hand, too, to put on your pet if you're forced to evacuate. (Your pet's permanent ID isn't of much use if you can't be home to answer the phone.) One of the easiest: Key tags on which you can jot a current number, slip into a plastic housing, and then attach to your pet's collar.

4. Keep Vaccinations - and Records - Current

Infectious diseases can be spread from dog to dog through floodwaters, which is why keeping pets' vaccinations up-to-date is essential. Kennel cough, although not serious, is common in sheltering situations and also preventable through vaccinations.

Prepare a file with up-to-date medical and vaccination records, your pets' microchip or tattoo numbers, your veterinarian's phone number and address, feeding and medication instructions, and recent pictures of your animals. Trade copies of emergency files with another pet-loving friend - it's a good idea for someone else to know about your pet should anything happen to you.

5. Have Restraints Ready

Even normally obedient dogs can behave rather strangely when stressed by an emergency. Consequently, you should be prepared to restrain your pet - for his safety and the safety of others.

Keep leashes and carriers ready for emergencies. Ready means at hand - the means to transport your pet shouldn't be something you have to find and pull from the rafters. Harnesses work better than collars at keeping panicky pets safe.

Shipping crates are probably the least-thought-of pieces of emergency equipment for pet owners - but are among the most important. Sturdy crates keep pets safe and give rescuers more options in housing pets. They give you more options, too, in the homes of friends or relatives, or in shelters outside of the area.

Depending on weather conditions, crated pets may also be safely left overnight in vehicles.

Another item to keep on hand is a muzzle, because frightened and injured dogs are more likely to bite.

6. Rotate a Supply of Food, Water, and Medications

Keep several days worth of food and safe drinking water as well as any necessary medicines packed and ready to go in the event of a disaster. Rotate your supplies so they do not get stale. If your pet eats canned food, be sure to keep an extra can opener and spoon tucked in among the emergency supplies.

I have read your letter to the Ramapo Board for help in donations for the Disaster program you are trying to put together. While Ramapo Kennel Club feels this is needed, we would like to know a little more about it. We would like to know if you would like to set up a booth free of charge at our show with all the information on this unit, and perhaps we can get some donations at our two day show in oct. at the sussex county fair grounds

Sincerely
Shirley Irwin Con- Secty Ramapo KC

Dear Shirley,

Thank you for your interest in this project. While I am not at the head of this project, (Dr. Dashfield is, of course) I will broach the subject with her. It is a great idea. She has a most willing personality.

Things are occurring at a quick pace. My next letter of information should go out this coming month.

Karen has received a donation of a rolling classroom, a sort of box truck, I believe. She is in the process of refurbishing this 1987 truck. certain people have volunteered to tune it up or whatever. Others have volunteered to set up some kennels. She will have an examination table and room for medical equipment. Still she will need a trailer. At least now she has a bone fide disaster truck.

At the moment, she is negotiating with her own insurance company and NJ State to get the unit on the road. Hopefully, by October, she could present the unit at your show. She is investigating sponsors for advertisement on the truck itself

All at the same time, she has engaged an attorney to establish this unit as a nonprofit enterprise. Of course, this is pro bono.. The attorney has to get to it

Now all of the voluntary donations are just that and take time to fit the work in people's work schedules. So as of a few days ago, the truck was not mobile and not registered and plated.

In addition, I am looking into the Community Achievement Award from the AKC. At the moment we still need funds to lubricate these activities.

This is the last report as of 10-12 days ago. I have not had a chance to phone her. I have just put on a program, prepped for a match, run a meeting and board meeting, and helped Helmi K. at the Monmouth Trophy Table as well as run my own business. Never mind the dogs and horses. Or my health. But I shall not try to preach to the converted. We all are spinning with commitments.

Again thank you for your club's support I will be sure to send the updated letter to your address.

Subject: Letters needed in NJ!!!

We really need letters to go in on this. ...Farm Sanctuary is trying to get very restrictive animal agriculture laws passed in NJ — as a foot in the door to force them on animal agriculture throughout the country - by having the governor veto the standards that have been carefully thought out. As you know, the Governor is in the pocket of the animal rights people -

A brief e-mail will do...something along the lines of experts (veterinarians, the NJ Farm Bureau, NJ Dept of Agriculture etc) have drawn up these standards, and it is their expertise that should be relied on, not propaganda from animal rights activists such as Farm Sanctuary (they were behind the Florida pig initiative) and non-farming people with no experience in the field....If you use the letter below, please change it a bit.

Folks, this is important -- I know I keep asking for letters, but if we don't stand up to these people, we are looking at big trouble.

Subject [PRMA] Animal Rights issue

We need your help in NJ. Briefly, my husband retired as the State Vet in Jan. Prior to that he had been working on Minimum standards for the humane treatment of livestock (horses, sheep, cows, rabbits etc.) as requested by the state legislature. This was done to enable the state vets to apply consistent standards to ASPCA and PETA complaints about animal welfare. The rules have been published and it is time for comments to be received by the department of Agriculture. Unfortunately, because N.J. is populated primarily by non farming types and our animal agriculture is small, PETA and an insidious group called Farm Sanctuary, have been bombarding the department with negative comments. They want much tougher standards than proposed. ..in essence they want to do away with meat They have targeted N.J. hoping to win concessions which they can then force other states to comply wit As the largest rabbit breeder in N.J. we were involved with the rabbit portion and it is very broadly worded...no fears there folks! If each of you could send an email or a letter (I've attached simple wording below, feel free to alter as you wish) within the next week it will help all of us in AnimalAgriculture. Feel free to share this with any other groups or species that you are in contact with.

I need your help in responding to the proposed regulations. Animal rightists are sending in comments that the rules are not "tough enough" at the rate of 80 per day. The counts pro and con stands at 790 to 2. Not good odds to have the governor pass the scientifically supportable version that Ernie has worked on for 6 years. He is forbidden to "politic" hence my plea for help. If each of you would get 5 or 10 or more people to email or write there is still hope. Call me if you have any questions. Following is all that is necessary to write, more can be added if you'd like to elaborate.

To Dr. Nancy Halpern, Director of Animal Health P.O. Box 330,
Trenton, N.J. 08625 Humane standards@ag.state.nj.us

I am writing in support of NJAC2:8, #PRN2003-168. I understand that the Department of Agriculture has developed scientifically based standards for the minimum humane care of animals in NJ. The intent of the legislation creating these rules was clear. Modifications to these rules would place an unnecessary burden on agriculture and animal owners. Signed your name and state or address. (people from all areas are free to write).

Again, call me if you have any questions and PLEASE HELP!!! Cindy
